Mayoralty Race, Transportation Issues, Day-Care Occupy Council

by Sandra Barnes

Hot on the heels of a city council election with only one issue—who would receive the highest number of votes and become mayor—former mayor Gil Weidenfeld placed “mayoral election” on the agenda of Monday’s council meeting. Weidenfeld stated that the present system of electing five members to council, with the high vote-getter traditionally elected mayor by his fellow councilmembers, did not truly emphasize the feeling of the community because the voter who wished to designate a choice for mayor could only do so by “bullet” voting, voting for only one or two candidates to insure that his favorite got the largest percentage of the votes.

Weidenfeld proposed, instead, a system whereby the voter would choose five candidates for council as usual and, on a second line of the ballot, vote for one of those candidates running for council who also wished to be considered for the mayor’s job. In this manner, one candidate could be voted for twice. This second vote would be advisory in nature. This position was supported in general by councilmen Charles Schwan and Richard Castaldi.

Mayor Richard Pilski, on the other hand, seeks a direct election of mayor. Pilski fears that the day will come when the highest vote-getter would not be chosen mayor by his fellow members. Weidenfeld’s plan would preserve the concept that a person not getting the highest number of votes could still be elected council; however, in Pilski’s plan, those losing in the mayoral race would be out because there would be a distinctly separate race for the council.

Both plans received the bitter opposition of councilman Tom White who contended that “There is too much emphasis on the position of mayor.” He stated that Greenbelt has a five-member legislative body with an appointed city manager form of government, and that this was the best system of governing a municipality that he has seen. “Why tamper with it?” he hotly argued. “The mayor of Greenbelt has no more power than the other councilmen, unless the charter is changed,” he continued; “we elect a president to preside over the meeting . . . mayor is a misnomer . . .”

The lone unsuccessful candidate for the city council, Bob Phillips, commented from the audience that in any decision to run for public office, one must expect that he might lose; so he had no qualms about a separate race for mayor with some potentially qualified people not elected to either mayor or council.

When it seemed that council was going to wrap itself up in this dispute, councilman Castaldi moved to send all the plans including the present system to the city’s Nominations and Elections Advisory Board for its comments. This was unanimously approved.

After School Child Care

Having received a letter from Mary Clarke, urging council to look into a program which would utilize the schools for after school supervised care of children in the 6-12 year old category, council moved to ask Greenbelt CARES and the city’s recreation department to sponsor a meeting with county agencies, representatives from the school system and citizens to see what the need is for such a program. Clarke envisioned that such a program would be self-supporting since the facilities—the public schools—exist; therefore only personnel would be needed. Clarke noted that many such programs exist in the Montgomery County schools and some in the District of Columbia schools, but none are operating in Prince George’s County.

Transportation Plans

ating the six alternative proposals for changes made by the State Highway Administration in the Greenbelt Road-Kenilworth Avenue interchange. In four of the alternatives Greenbelt Road would go under Kenilworth Avenue; only one eliminates the problem of cars from Springhill Lake crossing two lanes of traffic on Kenilworth Avenue to make a “U” turn and then onto the Beltway. All of the plans would make it extremely difficult for bicyclists and pedestrians to cross safely as potentially eight interchanges would be constructed.

Council therefore recommended that Giese communicate to the SHA that it consider three of the plans, with the most favored being the one that has Kenilworth Avenue as a free-flowing highway going under Greenbelt Road and providing for safe transit for those northbound from SHL and bicyclists and pedestrians. Councilman Schwan further commented that the city was already divided into seven segments by major roads and highways, and that state agencies ought to consider the social and environmental costs in their construction plans.

Metro “E” Route

All council members agreed to attend a meeting of the Council of Governments on October 19 during which alternative plans for the Metro “E” route (the Greenbelt line) will be discussed. These alternatives run the gamut from stopping the “E” route at Gallery Place in the District of Columbia to a Beltway terminus, either at Greenbelt or I-95. Council agreed that they would all be prepared to make suggestions to any or all of these proposals. A public forum on the “E” route is scheduled for November 14 followed by a recommendation of three alternatives by November 23 for further in-depth study.

Other Matters

The Jaycees Clubhouse, burned two years ago, was cleaned of glass and other hazards were removed following a complaint by parents and teachers at St. Hugh’s who feared a serious accident resulting from debris and the general run-down condition of the clubhouse.

Council agreed to have the city manager and police look into the placing of a stop sign on the corner of Pinecrest and Lakeside Drive following reports of motorists speeding in that area and creating unsafe conditions.

Council refused to allocate funds for the purchase of filing cabinets to be used by each member during his term of office to store the voluminous amount of materials collected . . . agreed to maintain the mural being painted on the side of the Co-op wall and re-coat with protective material when necessary.

Greenbelt CARES

Dennis Piendak, Assistant City Manager of Greenbelt, was elected president of the Maryland City Management Association (the State association of city managers) at a meeting held in Rockville in September. Piendak joined the city staff in the fall of 1972.

Prior to coming to Greenbelt, Piendak served as administrative assistant to the borough manager of Monroeville, Pa. He has also held internships with the cities of West Hartford, Conn., Cape May, N.J., and Whittemarsh Township, Pa. Previously he held other internships at Connecticut Public Expenditure Council and the Bureau of Government Research, Long Island, N.Y.

Harkins, Inc. Wins $2,591,797 Low Bid For Elderly Housing Building

by Mary Lou Williamson

Members of the city council at a special meeting September 28 paved the way for approval of Harkins, Inc., to construct the city’s 101-unit elderly housing facility on Ridge Road. If all goes well, construction should begin by mid-November.

Harkins, an established construction firm, has done considerable work in this field previously, working under construction guidelines established by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, (HUD).

Since all three bids were above the $2.5 million limit of funds available for the construction phase of the project, the city will negotiate with the low bidder to bring the final bid under that figure.

Members of council must then sit as the Board of Directors of the City of Greenbelt Housing for the Elderly, Inc., to accept the negotiated bid from Harkins and sign the contract. The corporation is a city-owned, non-profit subsidiary formed to administer the project.

The Maryland Community Development Administration has provided a letter of commitment for financing the project to HUD (the deadline was October 1), good for 90 days. Thus it is anticipated that a final closing of the temporary construction financing should be accomplished by November 7. As soon as the financing is obtained, the contractor can proceed. Bid specifications require construction to be completed within 360 calendar days from the date of the notice to proceed. The building should thus be completed by early November, 1978.

The Board of Directors is expected to meet as soon as possible to accept the bid.

Cost Savings

Council, City Manager Jim Giese and architect Steve Parker then discussed possible ways to reduce the total bid. Three possible cost-saving alternatives had been written into the specifications by Parker: (1) windows, (2) kitchen equipment and (3) surface material for an outdoor terrace. Giese recommended against omitting the equipment for the kitchen, left open any decision on windows and, along with Parker, recommended a switch from brick to exposed aggregate concrete for the terrace for a savings of $6,900. The windows, which Giese referred to as the “Cadillac” of the trade, are formed by two panes of glass with a built-in venetian blind between them. The blinds use the narrow, one-inch slats, not the more common two-inch variety and thus are less noticeable when open. Their advantages include (1) no cleaning required and (2) increased energy efficiency by literally keeping heat from the summer sun out of the building. The one disadvantage noted is that the blinds cannot be raised and lowered. The inside pane is removable, however making it possible to remove the blind, a course which nevertheless seems unlikely.

Giese also pointed out that alternative windows, almost as desirable, could be obtained for a savings of up to $53,000. Other kinds of areas where smaller savings might be effected without sacrificing the good quality of materials and construction were listed by Giese: substitution of less expensive ceramic tile, quarry tile for unglazed brick for the lobby floor, swinging for sliding automatic doors, less expensive interior doors, hardware; alternate methods of installation, for example, of the sprinkler system, to suit the contractor’s normal method rather than that called for in the architect’s plans.

Representatives from Harkin, the city staff and the architect must work out the details to bring the bid under $2.5 million before a meeting can be set to authorize signing of a contract.

Animal Control Display

An animal control unit display is at the Greenbelt post office this week. Provided by Prince Georges County, the display features rules and recommendations concerning pets. Especially emphasized are the types of licenses required and the penalties for violations.

The post office department is deeply concerned about the control of dogs and asks that all residents keep their dogs under restraint when the mail is being delivered. Many carriers are bitten and attacked. It is reported that throughout the United States man’s best friend bites thousands of carriers every year.

Elderly Housing

With construction of the elderly housing facility to be built on Ridge Road expected to start shortly, there has been an increased number of inquiries to the city office concerning a waiting list for the project. Applications for occupancy of this building are not being taken at this time, and probably will not be taken for another year; nor is there any kind of waiting list.

Persons interested in receiving information on how to become a resident of the elderly housing project may request that their name be added to the mailing list which the city is maintaining. This list is being maintained only for the purpose of mailing out information when it becomes available. Persons whose names are on the list will not be given any special preference over other persons in the community who may be interested in living in the elderly housing project.

Program to Assist Home Buyers, Sellers

On Wednesday, October 19, at 7:30 p.m. a program covering legal and financial aspects of buying and selling a house, and concerning different types of homes (single, condominium, or cooperative) will be held in the Meeting Room at the Greenbelt Library.

On the discussion panel and available for questions and answers will be John Cassidy, Esquire, Cassidy and Cassidy; Ronald Tousignant, GRI, Associate Broker, Harloff and Perkins; Mary Dixon, Greenbelt Homes; and Steve Frankenberg, Twin Pines Savings and Loan.

The program, co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Library and Twin Pines, will be interpreted for the deaf.

HOLIDAY REFUSE SCHEDULE

Due to the upcoming Columbus Day holiday on Monday, October 10, there will be no refuse collection on that day. The regular Monday route will be picked up on Tuesday and the Tuesday route will be picked up on Wednesday. There will be no paper collection on Wednesday. An effort will be made to pick up all paper on Thursday. Refuse collection for Friday and Saturday will follow the normal schedule.

Health Fair Oct. 15

To the Editor:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my thanks to the many people who are aiding me and the Greenbelt Lions in trying to make the Health Fair a huge success for Greenbelters. First the News Review in co-operating with us in every step. They are doing a marvelous job. Then, of course, the Woman's Club of Greenbelt, with the senior citizens who are also taking phone calls at the Mowatt Methodist Church through Oct. 14. This is something new we are attempting to accomplish, that is by appointments only. As soon as the girls get 400 appointments, we will close the book for any more phone calls. We are grateful for the use of the Methodist Church, their phones, their lights and practically the whole building on Oct. 15.

We, the Greenbelt Lions do this for your benefit and we pray that you take advantage of the Fair.

Plans for this fair started about nine months ago. First the date was obtained then all the doctors, nurses and technicians. Without all of their co-operation I do not know how we could accomplish this.

I also wish to thank the Co-op pharmacists Sue and Barbara and Greenbelt Federal Credit Union for helping to pay for the ad in our News Review. Naturally my two Lions, our president Ivan Lindahl and John Phillips for co-chairing with me. It is wonderful to get such help for a cause that you Greenbelters should take advantage of or anyone else that wishes to take this health test. It is not limited to Greenbelt. We have spot radio announcements — to Lion Emory Harman, we give thanks for getting his radio friends to do this . . . so to you, play safe, take a check-up and stay well.

"Need Bus Rescheduling"

To the Editor:

I just returned from a week's vacation yesterday and am glad to hear things are getting better on the Metro-rail blue line.

I work downtown, from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. (not for the government). These are my hours; I can't change them. I get off at Metro Center because I work right there.

When the buses were running downtown, I caught one right on the corner where I live, at 7:45 a.m., and got downtown just about 8:45. I used to get on the bus at 11th and Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., at 6:13 p.m., and was home by 7:10 or 7:15 at the latest.

Now I must catch a bus 15 minutes earlier. There is no way I can get to the Metro Center in time to catch the bus at Stadium-Armory at 6:20, and, believe me, the bus drivers leave at 6:20. The next bus for Greenbelt leaves at 6:55; that leaves me with at least a half-hour wait on 19th St., S.E. Does anyone but we who wait there know what that means?

We're going to have flood lights; big deal, when people get knocked in the head in the daytime. There are no phones; no protection whatsoever.

The week before last, it took me one hour and 35 minutes to get to work, with all the stops and starts. Then, that very night, the 6:55 bus didn't show up, so I had to wait until 7:30. Thus, it was almost 8:30 before I got home.

You know what? This is a heck of a long day when you work 7½ hours. It's getting me down, and I'm not saying what it's doing to my nerves.

As far as I'm concerned, and a few other people I ride with agree — they can take the Metro-rail blue line and throw it . . . oh well, anywhere!

If there was a 6:30 p.m. bus, it would be better. We could make it, most of us. No one is concerned with the people who don't work for the government.

And another thing. There is more traffic in the morning, which means more people are driving to work now, and I don't blame them.

I understand Mr. Francis White is on the Metro board. Can't he do something about this mess? Believe me, I'm not the only complainer. Just talk to a few people who reside in Greenbelt and have to ride the rail.

Bus re-routing, heck. We need a bus re-scheduling.

I haven't said anything about the equipment that doesn't work. Everybody knows about that.

Just show me where it's the least bit better . . .

(Mrs.) Anna E. Wolff

Roosevelt Soccer Team Beats Friendly, Surrattsville

Roosevelt High School's soccer team continued its winning streak by defeating Friendly High School on Monday afternoon, Oct. 3 on Braden Field.

Scoreless during the first half, the "Raiders" made 2 goals in the second half to win 2-0. The first point came on a penalty kick by Lance McMann followed by a goal made by Clint Boushell with an assist by Tim Milhollen.

The team also beat Surrattsville 2-0 on Friday, Sept. 30 with goals by Paul Felsher and Lance McMann.

The next home game for the "Raiders" will be Friday, Oct. 7 at 4:15 on Braden Field. Everyone is welcome to come out and cheer for the team.

What Do You Mean It Works Most of the Time!

To the Editor:

Your reporter, Mike Jones, whose name is affixed to the Sept. 29, News Review story on Metrorail, seemingly has experienced better luck with it than I have. Better than a lot of other people have had, because there are far fewer people using the R-12 Greenbelt buses nowadays, and I think some people are voting their feelings.

He says 'more entrance and exit gates appear to be operational.' That could be true, but it leaves an impression that he doesn't get on and off where I do — Jail-Hospital (officially known as "Stadium-Armory") and Farragut West. The typical scene at Farragut West, mornings about 9 a.m., includes a mass of people — dozens, impossible to count — jamming together to try to get through the four, or three, or two, or one, operating exit gate(s).

One morning, the same week that Jones' unfortunate artwork appeared, the frustrations of people trying to get out of the station caused some ugly moments as some men tried to get through locked side gates (without using their fare-cards) to save time, and the kiosk attendants fought to force them back into the herd.

Most days, at least one gate is "inoperative" when I come along, and often more than one — sometimes the majority — don't work, at least for short times, simultaneously. (That's when the kiosk attendants take the trouble to try to have most gates operating in the direction of the traffic flow, which isn't always the case.)

Jones said "It also appeared that all escalators were functioning." When? Most mornings, the escalator going up from the train platform to the main station at Farragut West's 17th St. end doesn't work, and the day his piece appeared it was blocked off for repairs and we had to walk up the down stairway (well, the down escalator). Friday a.m., the down escalator was blocked off and we resumed walking up the up escalator. But there was no mob at the exits. Why? Because the train we arrived on had come in about 10 minutes or so after it should have, and the people from Virginia had gotten out of the station before we got there, instead of having to get out just when we do. Why was our train late? Because —

The first train we got out of Jail-Hospital got to Capitol South and then the train driver told us, over the p.a. system, to get out of the train and await the next one. So we did, and it came after a while, and we got into it, and it went a little way and then paused for a while, a while, a while, before continuing.

I wonder about that pause. Was it, I hope, because our first train driver had discovered she had some hostages aboard and was trying to free them? You see, and this illustrates how many kinds of faulty equipment Metrorail has, she had to tell us to get out because of some malfunction she knew about on the train. But she didn't know that in at least one car the p.a. didn't work; some of the people in that car stayed on the car when she drove it out of the station toward where it would be repaired. That's what one man said who'd been in that car.

Naturally, there were no Metro employees on the station or in the train to see to it that every passenger got off. Our county representative and those from other jurisdictions, on the Metro board of directors, are busily saving money. That's why they are forcing people to transfer part way into D.C., from bus to rail, and are refusing to let the buses go all the way until we have an operating rail system that goes all the way. So naturally they save money by not having real live, paid employees on the station platforms and in the trains to see to it that in emergencies or just routine mechanical breakdowns (and I do mean routine) that everyone is cared for properly.

One a.m. last week the down escalator at Jail-Hospital didn't work. Then, of course Metro didn't run again to Jail-Hospital Oct. 3 p.m. — more equipment problems?

THANKS

To the Editor:

I wish to thank the voters who re-elected me to serve for the seventh term on the city council.

To those that did not vote for me I will have to work harder to gain your confidence. To those people who helped me throughout the campaign and on election day you have my heartfelt gratitude. There have been so many of you that have been with me in all my campaigns over all these years.

Thanks to the council for their votes so that I might serve the city as the mayor. A special thank you to my wife Claire and my children for their encouragement, patience, and understanding over all these years.

As in the past, I will continue to do all I can to justify your faith in me.

We have it on high authority that sharing the ride is a very good idea.

It made sense to Noah.
After all, it was a whole lot more economical and efficient to get together and share the ride than it would have been for everybody to go their own way.
And that still holds true today. Sharing the ride with just one other person can cut your commuting costs in half.

Think about it.

Share the ride with a friend.
It sure beats driving alone.
